

INADEQUATE LIVING CONDITIONS

If you think the conditions of your rental unit are in violation of housing, health, or safety codes follow the steps below.

1. Contact the Landlord FIRST
 - Call the landlord. This gives the landlord an opportunity to fix the problem. In addition, calling first may help to keep a good tenant-landlord relationship (a phone call is less formal than a written notice).
 - Give the landlord a written notice if the phone call does not resolve the problem. The notice should explain the problem and request that the landlord take action to correct it. Keep a signed and dated copy.
2. Call the Housing Inspection Office. The city housing inspector is responsible for investigating health and safety violations.
